

HEAD, DEPARTMENT OF INFORMATION SYSTEMS

The National University of Singapore (NUS) is a multi-campus university of global standing, with distinctive strengths in education and research and an entrepreneurial dimension. It has an enrolment of 23,500 undergraduate and more than 9,000 graduate students from 88 countries. NUS also enjoys a close teaching-research association with 14 national-level, 16 university-level and 80 faculty-based research institutes and centres. Research activities are strategic and robust, and a “no walls” collaborative culture forms the bedrock of NUS’ research-intensive vibrancy. In addition, a spirit of entrepreneurship and innovation promotes creative enterprise university-wide.

NUS plays an active role in international academic networks such as the International Alliance of Research Universities (IARU) and Association of Pacific Rim Universities (APRU). It is ranked amongst the best universities in the world, and is well-regarded for research and teaching in multiple disciplines. For more information, please visit: www.nus.edu.sg

Established in 1998, NUS School of Computing is home to some 80 faculty members who have come from leading universities worldwide. It has a student population of about 2,200, a quarter of them graduate students. The School comprises the Departments of Computer Science and Information Systems.

The Department of Information Systems is currently one of the most active sites for information systems and related research in the Asia-Pacific region. Its faculty members have published their work in top international journals. The Department has and will continue to engage internationally renowned scholars to serve in various capacities.

The University seeks to appoint an internationally-recognized scholar, with extensive and scholarly activity, as Head of Department of Information Systems. The Head will lead the Department in all administrative and academic matters, including strategic planning, research and program development, funding and implementation of academic review process.
