Dear MISQ Community of Authors, Editors, and Reviewers:

Governments, public health officials, healthcare professionals, the private sector, universities, researchers, and citizens from all over the world are working to implement steps to slow the spread of COVID-19 and to care for those affected by the novel coronavirus. At this unprecedented time, we are dealing with significant disruptions in how we live and work.

At the MIS Quarterly, our service to the community remains of key importance at this time. We are processing submissions to the MIS Quarterly as normal. While doing so, we are committed to supporting our authors, reviewers, and editors with additional flexibility by providing extensions if needed.

As an author, please do not hesitate to contact the Senior Editor if you require additional time to submit your revision.

As a reviewer, please contact the Associate Editor if you will need additional time for your review.

Senior Editors and Associate Editors will engage as an editorial team to manage the progression of the review process while accommodating reasonable extensions.

Our Senior Editors and Associate Editors are also dealing with disruptions in their lives and work, which may contribute to the review process taking additional time.

As a global community, we are in this together.

We appreciate your cooperation in continuing to achieve our objectives while supporting each other.

Please stay safe and healthy.

Best regards,
